

For the families who ask you what to do at home

The school day ends. The growing doesn't.

KudoKids is a free app for kids 3–12. Real routines at home earn screen time, and the parent decides what it's worth.

Recommended by child-development experts. Live now on the web, iOS and Android.

- 1 Set. A parent picks two or three routines that already matter at home — teeth, homework, feed the dog.
- 2 Earn. The child finishes one and earns coins. The parent chooses which tasks need their sign-off.
- 3 Spend. Coins buy the rewards the parent set — a trip for ice cream, picking tonight's dinner, or screen time by the minute.

Families sign up themselves, and it takes about five minutes.

What it never does

- No ads*
- No friends until a parent turns them on
- No child data sold — not ever
- No way for a child to spend real money

*ads can be shown via the YouTube and web browser features if a parent turns them on.

Free, and it stays free

Every routine, the games, the daily check-in, and Cosmo. The paid plan adds extras like other worlds and companion looks — never anything a child needs.

Social-emotional learning, practiced at home.

What kids practice in KudoKids — naming what they feel in the daily check-in, managing themselves, taking responsibility for a routine, being kind to someone else — maps to the five CASEL competencies: self-awareness, self-management, social awareness, relationship skills, and responsible decision-making. That's the framework the app was designed against. KudoKids isn't a SEL curriculum; it's what happens at home after one. Not a certification — nobody has audited us against it.

Nothing lands on your staff. The answer lands at home.

The families who ask what to do about screens at home get something you can hand them. No roster, no student list, no platform to run, no training — a parent signs up on their own. When a school wants every family covered, it funds the full version for all of them on one agreement, with nothing for your staff to run. That conversation is ours to have with your school: kudokids.org/schools

The best way to judge it is to open it.

Two minutes, no card — the same way a parent would. If anything doesn't hold up, I'd rather hear it from you.

Joseph Yelle · joseph@kudokids.org · (910) 593-7070

No ads* · No child data sold · Ages 3–12

*ads can be shown via the YouTube and web browser features if a parent turns them on.

1 Set

2 Earn

3 Spend

Scan to open kudokids.org/schools